YOUNG ISRAEL OF WEST HARTFORD

Rabbi's Corner

Last Shabbat Elana and I were at the HHNE school Shabbaton in a camp in Woodstock, CT. The Shabbaton was nice and, although it was really cold outside, the grounds and scenery of the camp were so beautiful. What was even more beautiful were the kids from our shul. I was able to observe a lot of the kids over the course of Shabbat and I thought it would be important to share my impressions with you. All I can say is that our kids are awesome! Each and every one of them impressed me in different ways. They are just great kids through and through and I am so proud of them.

This week is our annual "Transplant Yourself Shabbat!" Thanks to Steven Bernstein for organizing this. It is the second year we are doing this and it is truly a wonderful way to spend time with other people in the shul. Whether or not you participated in the Friday night joint meals, you are ALL invited to come to Seudah Shlishit in the shul at approximately 4:40pm this Shabbat afternoon. It is fun to be able to end the Shabbat together as a community. Bring yourselves and your kids. There will be plenty of good food, singing, and Divrei Torah by Tova Goldfischer, Ilana Bernstein, and Lenny Margulis.

Thanks to all those who have been making an extra effort to come to minyan in the last few weeks since I spoke about this great need. Thanks to the wives who have graciously agreed to take care of the kids while husbands go to shul! It makes a huge difference. Let's keep it up. Thanks to everyone who really pulled through to come to minyan in the snow this past Thursday morning. We had 23 people despite the snow!!

Thanks to Stephen Mendelsohn for helping out so much with the website as well as with the new Twitter site for the Eruv! It is wonderful.

I am sorry to have missed last week's Shabbat lunch for 4-8th grade kids. I hear that it was a big success and that I missed a great time. Yasher Koach to all those who helped to plan and run it and to those who came to participate.

Shabbat Shalom!

Parshat Mishpatim – G-d and Man

Torah in Motion - Rabbi Jay Kelman

How does one come close to G-d? How can one hold on to great religious experiences as we go through the daily routine of life? This was the problem facing the Jewish people as the events of Sinai faded. How would they be able to use Sinai to infuse their life with holiness? The Torah hints at an answer with the long series of laws that follow on the heels of Sinai. These laws focus on interpersonal relations and are the key to Divine service. They progress from those norms, which prevent the breakdown of society to laws that reflect the ethical demands placed on a holy nation. We begin with those laws, which carry the death penalty such as kidnapping, cursing parents and progress to the prevention of bodily assault and property damage and even the rights of animals. The Torah then moves to detailing the meticulous nature with which we must guard our friends' possessions; to the obligation to loan money, interest free to those in need; to helping our enemies and protecting the rights of the foreigner, a revolutionary concept in the ancient world. Helping man is thus transformed to Divine service.

At the conclusion of these interpersonal laws the Torah then details a small number of laws regarding our relationship to G-d. Shmitta, Shabbat, the Pilgrim festivals and Kashrut. Having created a just society we are now ready to worship G-d. Yet interestingly even these mitzvot seem to focus on the interpersonal and not the Divine aspect. "Six days you shall do your work and on the seventh day you must rest so that your donkey and ox will be able to rest and your maid's son and the foreigner will be able to rest" (23:12). The Torah tells us that we must observe Shabbat lest we exploit those who work for us or work our animals too hard. No mention is made of G-d creating the world in six days, and resting on the seventh day. Immediately preceding this verse the Torah tells us that we must observe the sabbatical year so that "the needy among you will then be able to eat from your fields just as you do, and whatever is left over can be eaten by wild animals" (12:11). Missing from this explanation is the standard one given in Leviticus that it is "G-d's Shabbat" a way to acknowledge as does Shabbat, G-d's ownership of the world. If one truly believes G-d created the world and rested on the seventh day then you will treat your workers with dignity, respect and consideration for their needs. If you wish to demonstrate that "to G-d is the land and all therein" then we will gladly share our produce with others. Thus those who are lacking in their observance of the mitzvot between man and man are unable to worship G-d properly.

In fact all mitzvot between man and G-d are meant to enhance our observance of the mitzvot between man and man. On its most basic level belief in G-d means you will act properly towards G-d's creations. But let us look at some specifics. The mitzva of prayer teaches us the importance of community because optimal prayer requires community presence. The laws of Passover teach us that we must fight for freedom for all. Belief in Moshiach requires that we try to perfect the world. Fasting on Yom Kippur helps us to understand the need to alleviate hunger in the world. The laws of modesty teach us the importance of respecting the privacy of others. Kashrut teaches that there must be limits to our desires. Sitting in a sukkah teaches us the temporary nature of life and thus inspires us to act now. The list goes on and on. Divine service by definition means improving the lot of man. The path to Sinai and Divine revelation is right in front of us each and every day. By helping bring a smile to someone's face we bring ourselves closer to our Creator.
