YOUNG ISRAEL OF WEST HARTFORD

Rabbi's Corner

It is always hard to transition from vacation mode back to work mode. This week has been so hectic getting back to real life and catching up on all that I missed in the week I was away. It is only when you leave and come back that you realize just how much happens every week here at YIWH! It is a wonderful thing.

I am so sorry that I did not get to experience the Chinese-Jewish Fusion lunch and lecture by Vera Schwarcz last Shabbat. I heard that it was very successful and I am so glad. Thanks SO much to all who helped to run and organize it especially Steven Bernstein. Also, thanks so much to Vera Schwarcz who took time out of her very busy schedule to share her thoughts and her research with us. It is much appreciated.

Mazal Tov to HHNE and the entire community on the inaugural week in the new high school building. It is a beautiful building and it feels so wonderful to walk in there and experience this great achievement for the school. It was so nice davening mincha/maariv there every day in the amazing beit midrash with a gorgeous view of the back forest. It was inspiring. I also really enjoyed teaching class in my new classroom with all its wonderful features. I hope to see all of you at the Grand Opening and Community Celebration on Sunday at 12pm. Yasher Koach to all those who put in so many thousands of hours of work in planning, fundraising, executing this project, in making the move last week, and in making this dream a reality.

I am part of a committee at the Jewish Historical Society of Greater Hartford that is planning a Jewish Historical Tour of this area for the beginning of next year.

We had our first meeting this week and it is an exciting project. They have people on board from all kinds of institutions and organizations and are trying to make this a really fun/informative/educational project in the most professional way. This will be much more than taking people around and pointing out buildings. If any of you have been to the Tenement Museum in New York you know that history can really come alive in many ways. This tour will be along similar lines. Our shul will have a part in this project in doing historical research, in developing the tour, and also participating in it. They plan to have tours run a few times a year and then private tours for groups

Having the Time of Your Life

By Rabbi Mayer Twersky

www.torahweb.org

“This month shall be to you the beginning of months; it shall be the first month of the year to you” (Shemos 12:2).

Seforno explains that Nissan ranks as the first month because our moral-spiritual existence began in Nissan. A slave’s time is not his own, thus he can not live as he sees fit. Bondage is not merely a physical blight, but a spiritual one as well.

We thank Hakadosh Baruch Hu daily for the gift of freedom (“shelo asani aved – that You didn’t create me as a slave”) because the gift of freedom is the gift of life. The equation is threefold: freedom = time = life. On the one hand, the truth of this equation is so much so that it seems almost superfluous to mention it. And yet, we lose sight of the practical corollaries to this existential equation. Since we correctly, instinctively, cherish life and freedom, then we ought to equally cherish time. Since we appropriately zealously safeguard life and freedom, then we ought to be equally zealous in safeguarding time. Since we accurately experience loss of life as tragic, how can we be so complacent, at times even sanguine, about waste of time?

In a much quoted passage the Zohar Hakadosh explains “Avraham zakein bo bayamim” – conventionally understood to mean that Avraham was elderly, getting along in days – that Avraham was elderly, coming with days, that he had not squandered a single day of his life. In a similar vein the Ohr Hachaim Hakadosh quotes the Arizal that our neshamas are an aggregate of many nitzos (sparks), the number of nitzos corresponding to the number of days apportioned to us. Every day is a unique, once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to perfect the corresponding nitzos of our neshama. A day well spent perfects a part of our neshama, a day squandered means that the corresponding nitzos of our neshama remains unperfected.

The great Reb Yisroel Salanter drew inspiration from the shoemaker in Vilna who, to candlelight, worked well into the night. And even when the candle, almost totally spent, flickered on the verge of becoming extinguished, he relentlessly tried to accomplish a little more. So too, said Reb Yisroel, our neshama is likened to a candle (“ner Hashem nishmas adam”). As long as the candle, albeit on the verge of becoming extinguished in this world, yet flickers, we have to persist in our avodas Hashem.

Yakrus hazeman (the valuableness of time) is a fundamental concept in Yahadus. By contrast, Western society values “free time”. Free time is when one is not beholden to another (an employer, et al.), and hence one is free to do anything he/she pleases. Or, one is free to do nothing as he pleases – to lounge around, to sleep endlessly, to banter pointlessly, etc. Yakrus, on the other hand, teaches a credo of “hayom katser v’hamelacha meruba.” One’s avodas Hashem is never complete, there is always more to do, and, accordingly, time is forever a scarce commodity. Surely we rest and relax as needed to rejuvenate ourselves, but “free time”, in the Western society sense, does not exist.

The forum of a weekly dvar Torah does not accommodate a lengthy cheshbon hanefesh concerning how we use our time. Instead with your permission I would like to focus on a single instance wherein our Torah society has institutionalized the waste of time. I refer to the manner in which we celebrate semachot. Undoubtedly, celebrating a simcha is a miztva, and, as such, excellent use of time. It is, for instance, a great mizta to be misameach chassan v’kalah. The two hours or so, however, that often elapse between the scheduled start of the kabbalas panim and the late start of the chuppah do not contribute to simchas chassan v’kalah. These long stretches of down time are simply bitul zman (waste of time) – no more, no less. As such these long stretches also foster a sense of bitul (disregard, contempt) for zman (time). When hundreds of guests wait interminably for chassan and kallah to enter the dining hall after the chuppah, this is both bitul zman and bitul for people’s zman. Taking pictures, thereby generating momentos of a simcha, is worthwhile, but it does not justify bitul zman for hundreds of people.

An appropriate auspicious celebration of a simcha must reflect the Torah’s teachings regarding yakrus hazman. There are many eitzos tovos that can be implemented: schedule the chuppah at a realistic time and keep to the schedule, take pictures after the wedding when the guests have departed, etc. Whatever combination of strategies we choose, we must ensure that we do not compromise on our simcha by institutionalizing bitul zman.
