YOUNG ISRAEL OF WEST HARTFORD

Rabbi's Corner

This week we have been busy at work trying to put together a brochure for our shul. This is part of the general PR and recruitment activities that are all underway. The goal of the brochure which will be distributed in various places, is twofold: Firstly, we would like to attract people to come to our wonderful city, shul, and community. The more people know about us, the more people speak about us, the more that they can come and experience what we have to offer, the more we can grow and flourish.

Secondly, aside from just wanting to attract new people, we also would like others in the broader community to have a good feeling about who we are and see us as a positive force in the area.

So much research today has been done in the business world about the idea of branding and of perception; much of it applies to shul life as well. Every person, every shul, every company has a "brand", has an image that it portrays to others. A brand can be made up of many components such as a name, a symbol, a slogan etc... A brand is intended to identify the particular company, product, or in our case shul and to differentiate them from others. A brand tells a story of who you are and what makes you unique and attractive. For example, Coca Cola has branded itself with its slogan as "The Real Thing." This is the way that they wish to be perceived by the world. Whether people see it that way or not is a separate point (for all you Pepsi lovers out there...), but this is the image they wish to portray.

We too, as a shul, have an identity that is very special and worth portraying to others. There is a lot that we can do to shape our identity or our "brand" and we have already begun to engage in a lot of things towards that end such improving our website dramatically, working on the brochure, a shul logo, and perhaps even a slogan. We hope that all of these will help to reinforce for ourselves as well as to show others that we truly are a special shul full of life and vibrancy with so much to offer.

While it is never good to be overly concerned about what others think of you, it is important from the perspective of pride and self confidence as well as a marketing perspective to make sure that your true identity is

Rabbi David Silverstein (www.vbm-torah.org)

The final verse of Sefer Shemot describes the appearance of God's Presence in the Mishkan. By day, the Shekhina appeared in the form of clouds, whereas by night the cloud was replaced by fire. The Midrash Hagadol on this verse reveals the underlying symbolism behind this system:

"When Benei Yisrael saw the pillar of cloud resting upon the Mishkan, they rejoiced and said, 'Now the Almighty has forgiven us!' When night came, the pillar of fire descended and surrounded the Mishkan. They would see it entirely [submerged] in a flame of fire. They became distressed and wept and said, 'Woe unto us! For naught have we exerted ourselves. That which we made and glorified has been consumed in but an instant!' They arose early in the morning and saw the pillar of cloud surrounding it. They immediately rejoiced with immense gladness and said, 'This is testimony to all people on earth that if they want to do this to us – they cannot'... "

According to this Midrash, the cloud-fire cycle symbolizes the survival of Benei Yisrael from the flames of their enemies, their ultimate triumph over oppression, and the constancy of the Shekhina's residence among them. Regardless of how many fires are set to the spiritual "Mishkan" of Benei Yisrael, morning rises again, and the pillar of cloud supplants the pillar of fire.

This analogy may perhaps be extended to apply to the previous two verses, as well. Just before describing the two pillars, the Torah tells of how God's Presence in the Mishkan regulated Benei Yisrael's travel through the wilderness. So long as the clouds remained in place hovering over the Mishkan, Benei Yisrael encamped. When the cloud rose, Benei Yisrael picked up and embarked on the next leg of their journey. They would continue marching until the cloud lowered, at which point they would encamp and remain in place until the cloud rose once again.

This, too, may be seen homiletically as symbolic of Benei Yisrael's experience through exile. There is something more than disconcerting about arriving in a place without knowing the length of stay. Should they unpack their bags? Should they make themselves settled, anticipating a one- or two-year encampment, or should they keep their shoes on and bags packed, prepared to resume travel in a few hours? And during travel, Benei Yisrael never knew how much time was left. Looking at their watches or the odometer would give them no indication of when they could expect reaching their next destination. Their only source of security was the pillar that led the way or hovered over the Mishkan, the Presence of God that they confidently trusted to chart their journey. Their otherwise perpetual uncertainty was eliminated by the ever-present Shekhina which they saw, felt and followed throughout their sojourn.

This picture accurately describes the Jewish people's journey through history, as well. Wherever we arrived, we never knew for how long we would stay. Whenever we were banished, we never knew how long it would take before we would land on safe shores. But all throughout, we found comfort and solace in the invisible yet tangible Presence of God that charts our path. Our security lay in our trust in the Almighty whose mysterious cloud continues to lead us and guide us through the inhospitable "wilderness" of exile. Many times, this pillar of cloud suddenly transformed into a raging fire that appeared ready to consume our entire Mishkan. But that fire has always turned back into a cloud, we arose after the long night of darkness to find the Mishkan standing firm, tall and proud. The "pillar of cloud" has always served as our only source of security and comfort, and it is that same pillar that will continue leading us to our ultimate destination, speedily and in our days.

being communicated to others rather than a perceived identity that may not represent who you truly are. Having a strong and accurate "brand", identity, and sense of what makes us special and different can help us to network better, to have access to more resources, and to be invited to be part of important communal matters.

I would like to thank Helen Loew and Shimmy Trencher for taking this lead in putting together the brochure which will be ready in the near future. Stay tuned to see it very shortly!
